

My name is Sarah, and I am a mother of three kids—two boys and a girl. Although I don't live by the oilsands, they affect my life every day. The big businesses want to build a pipeline right through my community to transport the oil quickly to the south, and possibly to the US. What if the pipeline breaks and the oil spills in my community? Are my children at risk? The companies are going to make a lot of money off of the pipeline, but it's going to do nothing but harm for us.

Facts that help to support my opinion: